Have you put away your clothes?

Not all your clothes, just your white clothes. September is here and everyone knows that if you wear white after Labor Day you will reflect unnecessary amounts of sunlight that will be absorbed by Madagascan Rainbowfish and will cause them to lose their color. Unless I just made a crazy, random, accidental, scientific discovery, that's not true.

So, why can't we wear any of our white duds into Fall and Winter?

There is no truly defining answer to that question, but there is a pretty good historic marker.

According to Reader's Digest, during the early 1900's the only people who wore leisurely, lightweight clothing (often white in color) were the folks who had a lot more petty cash. In contrast to most people, it seems that if you sweated too much or got them dirty you could just go out and buy new ones.

By the 1950s, "no white after Labor Day" started showing up on the pages of magazines and a clothing no-no was born.

Can you imagine if we only wore our gospel "clothes" for a few months and then put them up so we could set ourselves apart from other folks?

Yes, believers are supposed to set themselves apart and stick out in this world, but not according to fashion fairy tales. Peter said that believers have been saved and set apart so they can proclaim the excellencies of the One who called them out of darkness and into the light. (1 Peter 2:9)

Unlike the Labor Day "law", the gospel is always in season, every season. And the excellencies of the One who called us never goes out of style and the radiant colors of grace and mercy and hope and joy and love never, ever fade.

Proclaiming with you,
